State Rep. Dan Flynn works on key initiatives and prepares for the 2011 Legislative Session

AUSTIN, TX – State Representative Dan Flynn recently returned from the American Legislative Exchange Council’s (ALEC) States and Nation Policy Summit where he participated in working groups to discuss key issues important to Texas citizens.

“Americans across the nation were very clear when they voted on Nov. 2. They want decisions made closer to home and want the federal government out of their personal decision making. Texans deserve to have the government work for them, not the other way around. I plan to work diligently with my conservative colleagues for less spending and reducing the size of government. Our citizens should not bear the burden of the recession by footing the bill for out-of-control spending,” said Flynn.

There was a strong economic focus at ALEC’s conference, with discussions centered around doing more in the states with less money, economic growth and development, and how to maintain public safety in times of reduced budgets. Flynn participated in workshops in which he plans to bring legislative solutions back to the state.

“ALEC’s States and Nation Policy Summit provided me the opportunity to learn what fiscally conservative solutions have worked in other states and how others have dealt with federal mandates. I also had the opportunity to meet with U.S. Senators and Congressman in which I expressed the concerns of Texas’ citizens about federal encroachment and reducing spending,” commented Flynn.
